Explanation of Local Expenditures: Summary: Local high schools could be able to provide twelfth-grade students with the required session in a convocation-type setting in their auditoriums. It is likely schools could accomplish the session within their existing convocation schedule, or could change their classroom schedule to accommodate the session with minimal interference of classes.

Local election boards would be required to assist schools with the required sessions. Depending on scheduling, the local boards should be able to carry out this provision within existing resources.

Background: There are approximately 400 public high schools. There were approximately 63,274 public and 5,453 private twelfth-grade students enrolled in school year 2004-2005.
